

Staying Well-Behaved Around the School Campus

School life is an exciting ride of learning and self experiences. It's a blend of early-morning classes, late-night study sessions, and the thrill of making lifelong friends. But we also need to stay obedient around the school campus.

First of all, let's talk about staying will-behaved in the classroom. One of the most common ways of disrespecting a teacher is talking during class. Talking to classmates while the teacher is teaching is disrespectful. It is disrespectful not only to the teacher but also to the whole class. Imagine your classmates laughing and chatting while you are trying to catch up on something important, you will definitely feel annoyed and disturbed.

Furthermore, we should stay alert in halls. Running in halls is really dangerous especially when the floor is slippery. You can really hurt yourself. If you run in the hall without paying attention to the surroundings, you may bump into others and the consequences can be more serious than you expect. Someone can even end up being in the hospital too.

Lastly, if we all stay well-behaved, we can make the school a whole other level. We can all have fun in school but the most important thing is being safe and happy.

(Hilary Lo_5K)