

The Dramatic Incident about the Crow Attack

Last weekend, David was having a relaxing hike in the woods with his family. On the way to the Peak, David saw many kinds of animals and plants that he hadn't seen before.

Suddenly, David heard a mysterious sound coming from a tree in front of him. He looked closer and saw a crow's nest. Out of curiosity, he walked towards the tree and saw the nest dangerously wedged between two branches. The nest was likely to fall down and the baby crows inside didn't know how to fly! David ran over to his parents and said, "Mom, Dad, can I climb up that tree to save the crows?"

"Of course not!" his dad told him. "It's too dangerous! Would you risk your life for some stupid crows? Nonsense!" David felt indignant. "Those crows are not stupid at all! They don't know the danger they're in and animals deserve a life too!" That threw his dad into deep contemplation.

David couldn't wait, running straight to the tree as fast as lightning. As David was climbing up, a bigger crow saw him climbing towards her nest. As the mother crow flew closer to attack, David panicked and climbed quicker towards the nest. Obviously, the mother was quicker, pecking David painfully. Soon he lost his grip and fell onto the ground. Unfortunately, the moment David had fallen, he had pulled on one of the branches keeping the nest in place. So, the nest fell. But David wouldn't let all his efforts be in vain. He stood up and staggered towards the falling nest. And he managed to catch it just before it fell onto the ground by diving on the ground, opening his palms to the sky as the nest landed softly into his palms. David breathed a sigh of relief as he fell unconscious.

David woke up in the hospital with his parents beside him and a few bouquets of flowers from his classmates. With tears brimmed in his eyes, Dad said, "I'm sorry for arguing with you, son. I should've helped you safely take the nest. Please forgive me." David smiled, despite his throbbing head, "It's okay. I understand. You just wanted to keep me safe. I love you, Dad."

"I love you too, son."

(Alicia Kwok_4P)